

KIRCO

Alan M. Kiriluk
Chairman

Alan Kiriluk came to the forefront of the real estate industry in Michigan and the Midwest through his development and management of high quality suburban office parks, innovative downtown redevelopment projects, and technically sophisticated industrial and research facilities.

He founded KIRCO in the mid-1970's and has seen it develop into one of the Midwest's leading real estate organizations. KIRCO has established an outstanding reputation for creating "best in class" business environments that attract Fortune 500 tenants from both business and industry, as well as prominent local and regional firms, service professionals, and others.

In May 2001, the City of Southfield awarded KIRCO "Developer of the Year." In January 1988, the editors of Crain's Detroit Business recognized Alan's leadership in the Detroit community when they selected him as one of their "Ten Top Newsmakers."

Alan began his career as a subcontractor in paving and road construction in his father's business. Later, on his own, he expanded the business to include office construction and corporate build-to-suit projects for such companies Sony Corporation of America, Electronic Data Systems Corporation (EDS), and Siemens Automotive.

Today, KIRCO provides, "the single-source solution for real estate assets," delivering prime development, construction and property management services with an "ownership mentality." Alan says, "This is more than a marketing phrase. It is the single characteristic that sets KIRCO apart from our competition. Our "decades" of experience of building for KIRCO, the owner, has given us an insight on product development and construction that we maintain sets us apart." KIRCO doesn't see itself as being in the building business. KIRCO is in the client satisfaction business. KIRCO builds and manages in order to satisfy its clients' needs over the long term.

For his philanthropic and fundraising efforts with Henry Ford Health Systems, Alan was awarded the 2004 Association of Fundraising Professionals Jewel Award.
